with care and attention, as if filming for a family member, brother or sister.

Nobuo Tazaki

Founder & President
Flower Video Company Limited

I established Flower Video in 1983 when I was working as a flower arranger, and became fascinated with the world of wedding videography.

I feel extremely privileged to be able to engage in this gratifying profession, which involves achieving customer satisfaction as a result of being at the scene of the client's important and memorable event, filming with care and attention, and delivering the end product.

Our work does not stop at simply recording an event; we make sure we put our heart and soul into every project we undertake, filming "as if for a family member, brother or sister." Our lineup of the latest film equipment ensures that each and every customer need is met. We minimize the risk of mishaps by leaving nothing to chance, and work continuously to improve staff skills. Our efforts have helped us win numerous commissions, especially from hotel clients, and build a track record of expertise over the years.

I wish to deeply thank all of our customers for their patronage, and look forward to their continued interest in Flower Video as it strives toward ever higher quality and customer satisfaction.

清徳池坊 Seitoku Ikenobo

After arriving in Kyoto in 1917, the first headmaster Yukei Nagase mastered moribana, nageire and chabana under Shoun Okamoto, the headmaster of the Seitoku School of ikebana.

During the early Showa period, Yukei taught many pupils at his marital home in Izuhara, Tsushima, until moving to Fukuoka after the Second World War, where he was appointed headmaster of the Seitoku School of ikebana by Shoun Okamoto, in 1955.

In the meantime, Yukei also mastered shoka at the Ikenobo School of ikebana based at Rokkakudo Temple, Kyoto, earning the entitlement to use the Ikenobo name, and renamed his school Seitoku Ikenobo in 1960.

Seitoku Ikenobo has participated in overseas ikebana exhibitions since 1965, developing international networks. School members also accompanied Emperor Showa's tour of the United States, serving as ikebana ambassadors.

Under current headmaster Yuzan Tazaki, the school and its pupils in Fukuoka, Kyoto, Osaka and elsewhere continue their commitment to the further growth and development of the art of ikebana.
